The application permits you to record a number of text logs of applications and Windows in textual form. This is very useful to those who wish to keep an overview of the processes performed by applications at any time and their registry. Its advantage over other softwares You know that OCR programs only write copies of the texts in your computer, but it can be vague or not be accurate. This is where Textractor comes in. There is no other text logging utility that has such efficiency and accuracy. Be careful when installing As with most software, you should be careful of the installations if you wish to have a smooth running and a clean system. The application was developed for Windows 2000/XP/Vista/7/8 and can be used for 32 and 64 bit versions. All in all, if you are looking for an OCR program, then it is the application for you, but you should not expect to find that particular functionality in a very simple application like Textractor. Outdated and plain interface Without denying that it is clean and easy-to-understand, the interface is rather dull and old-fashioned. You can type in a command line or browse for an application in the upper section. In the lower panel, you can preview the action performed and the date it was completed, information that you can copy and save as TXT or DOC. Its advantage over an OCR program OCR or Optical character recognition refers to a type of application that can automatically examine printed text and turns it to a format that the computer can interpret easier. Since the computer cannot perform this action without a digital camera or an optical scanner, you should know that it stores an image and not the actual text. OCR is the process of converting an image to text or convert files from image formats (BMP or JPG) to text formats (DOC or TXT). The advantage of Textractor over other OCR software is that it can capture the text applications output even if you do not have an optical reader. The utility can be
